

Notes on Contributors

Patricia Olga Hernández Espinoza is a faculty member at the Instituto Nacional de Antropología e Historia at Sonora, Mexico, Anthropology Department. She has research interests in the evolution through time of the population of Sonora state in Mexico.

Tom Heritage is a member of the Editorial Board of Local Population Studies. He obtained his PhD from the University of Southampton in 2020 for a thesis entitled: ‘The elderly populations of England and Wales, 1851-1911: a comparative study of selected counties’. He is currently a Postdoctoral Fellow at the Cambridge Group for the History of Population and Social Structure.

Following a career in the law, firstly as a solicitor and then a judge, in retirement Peter Jolly obtained a research masters degree focussing on Victorian bigamy. He is currently engaged in doctoral research at Reading University on early twentieth-century Berkshire domestic service.

Sue Jones is a member of the Local Population Studies Society (LPSS) Committee and editor of the LPSS Newsletter. She recently completed her DPhil at the Department of Continuing Education at Oxford University, entitled ‘Taking the measure: a demographic-based study of non-metropolitan Surrey c. 1550-1750’.

After gaining her degree through the Open University and the Oxford Department for Continuing Education, Sadie McMullon completed her PhD thesis ‘Migration to Fletton 1841-1911’ in 2018 with the Centre for English Local History at the University of Leicester under the supervision of Professor Kevin Schürer. Her research is now focused on the questions raised by the thesis. She is also journal editor of the Peterborough and District Family History Society.

Miriam Angélica Camacho Martínez is a PhD student in physical anthropology at the Escuela Nacional de Antropología e Historia in Mexico City, Mexico.

Lourdes Márquez Morfin has research interests in the bioarchaeology of pre-Hispanic Mexico and in epidemics of disease among the historical population of Mexico. She is at the Escuela Nacional de Antropología e Historia in Mexico City, Mexico.